FOREWORD

The future peace of the world depends largely upon the growing number of world-minded citizens and upon a peace-minded public in every country of the world. Boys and girls of today constitute the public opinion of tomorrow; and it is through the selection of books that parents, teachers and librarians have the opportunity to develop this international viewpoint.

The titles here listed have been selected, primarily, because they are books which children will read, and enjoy, if given to them at the right stage in their development. It has been divided into three sections; from the pre-school age through the Junior High School. They aim to present a background of other countries, and other people, in such a way that the reader will feel that a real experience has been created in his life. The information books have been so selected that they will supplement the school work and make it more enjoyable.

The supplementary list of those costing less than a dollar is added because many people feel that good children's books are expensive. The value of a good book should be judged by what it accomplishes during its life. It has a more lasting and widespread influence than any other purchase, for a child's recreation and pleasure, which is made with the same amount of money.

The theme of the National Book Week Program for this year is "Young America's Book Parade", but as good books about America are more generally known, and read, than books about other countries, we have not attempted to include them in this list.
